

Upon completion of the tax return and the final review process, the client will receive Form 8879, also known as the IRS e-file Signature Authorization. This form serves as the client's approval to electronically file their tax return with the Internal Revenue Service (IRS). Here's an overview of how the process typically works:

1. Preparation of Form 8879:

- The tax preparer will prepare Form 8879, which includes details of the client's tax return and serves as the authorization for electronic filing.
- The form will include the client's personal information, such as their name, Social Security number, and the tax year for which the return is being filed.

2. Client Signature:

- Once the client is satisfied with the information on Form 8879, they will be required to sign the form.
- The client's signature serves as their authorization for the tax preparer to electronically file their tax return on their behalf.

3. Submission to IRS:

- After obtaining the client's signature and any required authentication, the tax preparer will submit Form 8879 and the tax return to the IRS electronically.
- The IRS will process the return and send confirmation of acceptance once it has been successfully filed.

By using Form 8879, we ensure compliance with IRS requirements for electronic filing and obtain the client's authorization before submitting their tax return. This helps protect both the client and our firm by verifying the accuracy and legitimacy of the filing process.
